

INCREDIBLE HERITAGE

Established in 1894, the Algonquin has a storied and remarkable history. Reworked extensively in the 1920s by the legendary Donald Ross, the course was heavily renovated at the turn of the 21st century by Canadian Thomas McBroom. More recently, it was reworked under the watchful eye of Rod Whitman, one of Canada's most noted designers. Every one of Whitman's Canadian designs is in the Top 100 in Canada on SCOREGolf's biennial course ranking list.

The result? A course that was always breathtakingly beautiful is even more so, with ocean vistas more prominent than ever. And in a contemporary fashion, the Algonquin is playable by all levels of players, with few forced carries, and readily walkable.

"Whitman told me his goal is to have golfers say, 'Wow.' Mission accomplished."

THE GOLF COURSE

Revitalized. Restored. Rejuvenated. And incredibly rewarding.

Oh, and did we forget to mention more spectacular than practically any course in Canada? That’s the Algonquin, which for well more than a century has been among Canada’s seaside golfing greats.

But good golf can always get better, and that’s exactly what’s happened with the Algonquin. Under the guidance of Rod Whitman, the brilliant mind behind the creation of many of Canada’s top designs, the Algonquin has undergone an extensive renovation, in turn elevating it to its rightful place among the country’s best. With the renovation of the course now complete, it’s now your turn to enjoy the breathtaking beauty where spectacular golf meets incredible ocean vistas.

As the Globe and Mail said: “Whitman has created an open and expansive golf course that takes full advantage of proximity to the ocean, in this case the waters of Passamaquoddy Bay.”

“A four-hole stretch that starts the back nine has the potential to rival anything in Canada.”
