For well over a century the Algonquin has been among Canada’s seaside golfing greats. However, good golf can always get better, and that’s exactly what’s happened with the Algonquin.

Under the guidance of Rod Whitman, the brilliant mind behind the creation of many of Canada’s top designs, the Algonquin has undergone an extensive renovation, in turn elevating it to its rightful place among the country’s best. With the renovation of the course now complete, it’s now your turn to enjoy the breathtaking beauty where spectacular golf meets incredible ocean vistas.

As the Globe and Mail said: “Rod Whitman has created an open and expansive golf course that takes full advantage of proximity to the ocean, in this case the waters of Passamaquoddy Bay.”

Situated only a short drive from the New Brunswick airports at St. John and Fredericton, or a two- hour drive from Bangor, Maine, the Algonquin, with its classic 19th century hotel and brilliant golf course, is the ideal setting to make a lifetime or memories.

“The first four back nine holes will ultimately be worth the greens fee alone.”

INCREDIBLE HERITAGE

Established in 1894, the Algonquin has a storied and remarkable history. Reworked extensively in the 1920s by the legendary Donald Ross, the course was heavily renovated at the turn of the 21st century by Canadian Thomas McBroom. More recently, it was reworked under the watchful eye of Rod Whitman, one of Canada’s most noted designers. Every one of Whitman’s Canadian designs is in the Top 100 in Canada on SCOREGolf’s biennial course ranking list.

RENOVATION

Upon becoming part of the ownership of the Algonquin, Jim Spatz, CEO of Southwest Properties, determined the Algonquin’s golf course could be the equal of the magnificent and recently renovated hotel. Spatz hired Whitman’s team to highlight the course’s connection to the ocean, and given the course a links-like feel on several holes, opening up vistas and making it more enjoyable to play.

The renovation, completed in grown in by the end of the 2018 season, saw Whitman’s team undertake extensive changes:

- Seven new green complexes.
- Two entirely new holes (10 and 11) designed to take advantage of their proximity to the ocean.
- New tee complexes on nine holes.
- Extensive tree clearing to make the course more playable and highlight the ocean views.
- A complete rebunkering of the course. The new bunkers add a drama the course was previously lacking.

The result? A course that was always breathtakingly beautiful is even more so, with ocean vistas more prominent than ever. And in a contemporary fashion, the Algonquin is playable by all levels of players, with few forced carries, and readily walkable.

Always a classic course, Whitman’s team has accentuated the elements that made it great, and made the oceanside holes truly world-class.

“Whitman told me his goal is to have golfers say, ‘Wow.’ Mission accomplished.”
